Overview

Water industry in the Middle East

According to resources, Dubai Electricity & Water Authority (DEWA) expects daily water demand to reach 341 million gallons per day by 2011. A report issued in Dubai earlier this year said that the imminent shortage of water resources in the emirate has been compounded by the real estate boom, with new construction projects taking a larger share of resources. This is alarming since this region is already the driest in the world. The Gulf remains the largest market for water desalination in the world and local municipalities are seriously examining ways to double existing capacity to meet regional demand.

Waste industry in the Middle East

According to the World Bank estimates, tens of billions of dollars will be invested in the waste management and Environmental sectors in the Middle East over the next 10 years. To counter the acute increase in waste, the UAE alone will invest $46 Billion over the next decade in environmental and pollution control projects. This environmental budget has been thoughtfully set to realize a zero waste millennium development goal and pave the way for making waste management a sustainable business proposition through heightened public-private partnerships (PPPs).

The Middle East region is currently facing two major challenges : One being the scarcity of water and the other being the increasing population of waste due to its booming construction sector. The objective of this inaugural 2nd Annual Waste & Water 2008 is to bridge the gap between the waste and water industry whilst serving as an ideal platform for professionals from the waste and water industry to meet, network and exchange ideas for the improvement of these 2 major sectors in the Middle East.

Key benefits of attending:

- Keeping abreast with the various trends and developments in the water & waste industry
- Creating a competitive advantage through an effective water management plan
- Tackling future challenges in water and waste management
- Identifying the advanced technologies and methods for water, wastewater and waste treatment
- Embracing the benefits of reusing and recycling water, wastewater and solid waste
- Practicing good water conservation strategies to minimise loss of water
- Gaining better insights on hazardous waste management
